

MISSION

The Gatton College of Business and Economics is a part of the University of Kentucky which is a public, research-extensive, land grant University dedicated to enriching the lives of people through excellence in teaching, research, and service. The Gatton College's domain within the University is the intellectual disciplines of business and economics. Across these disciplines the College:

- Expands knowledge through research, scholarship and creative activity
- Facilitates learning, informed by scholarship and research
- Serves a global community by disseminating, sharing and applying knowledge
- Promotes human and economic development that improves lives within Kentucky's borders and beyond.

HISTORY

- 1925 - The College of Commerce was created from the Department of Economics and was given full accreditation by the AACSB International (The Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business).
- 1952 - The College began offering an MBA as veterans returned to attend college on the GI bill. Enrollment peaked in the early 1950s with the College graduating a total of approximately 200 graduates per year in all majors and degree programs combined.
- 1968 - With the College housed in a new facility, the name was formally changed to the College of Business and Economics
- 1995 - In recognition of his $14 million commitment, the Board of Trustees renamed the College in honor of Mr. Carol Martin Gatton, class of 1954 alumnus.
- 1999 - Mr. Douglas J. Von Allmen, a 1965 accounting graduate, and his wife, Linda, gave $7 million. In honor of his gift, the College's School of Accountancy was renamed for him.
- 2012 - David Blackwell becomes the seventh dean of the Gatton College of Business and Economics.
